TUGBOAT REST FRONT(RESTAURANT)is a functioning Tugboat Restaurant that travels, Captbike (MYSELF)go there on Angleloria My Superfemale Knightess Rider Supervolelicipede,Evil Villainesses want to steal the bike because SkeLetoria became a skeleton face because she tried to destroy the Ownerbiker ,but the Bike stopped her.SKELETORA lives in a Dimension ,Queendom between Eternia and Etheria in Castlefor Herskull.

That’s a fun, high-energy crossover concept: a traveling tugboat restaurant, a superheroic bike, and a villainess seeking revenge across dimensions. Here’s a cleaner story-style version of your idea:

Captain Bike rides Angleloria, his powerful Superfemale Knightess Rider Supervolelicipede, to the Tugboat Rest Front—a fully functioning tugboat restaurant that travels the seas and serves hungry adventurers.

But danger follows them. Skeletora, once a fierce villainess, tried to destroy the Ownerbiker. Angleloria intervened and stopped her attack, leaving Skeletora cursed with a skeleton-like face. Humiliated and furious, Skeletora retreats to Castlefor Herskull, located in her dark Queendom Dimension between Eternia and Etheria.

From her fortress, Skeletora gathers other evil villainesses. Their goal is to capture Angleloria and steal her extraordinary powers for themselves. Captain Bike must protect his living super-bike, defend the Tugboat Rest Front, and face Skeletora’s forces before they cross into his world.

Captain Bike and the Tugboat Rest Front

Character Profiles

Captain Bike

Role: Hero, Ownerbiker, and defender of Angleloria.
Home: The moving waterfront world of the Tugboat Rest Front.
Strengths: Courageous, loyal, creative under pressure, and always ready to help stranded travelers.
Goal: Keep Angleloria safe and prevent Skeletora's army from turning the peaceful restaurant into a dimensional war zone.

Angleloria

Role: Superfemale Knightess Rider Supervolelicipede.
Appearance: A magnificent living super-bike with shining armor, wing-like energy panels, and wheels that glow when she reaches full power.
Powers: Super speed, protective energy shields, dimensional sensing, and the ability to repel dark magic.
Personality: Noble, fearless, protective of Captain Bike, and unwilling to let anyone harm innocent people.

Skeletora

Role: Main villainess and ruler of Castlefor Herskull.
Realm: A Queendom Dimension suspended between Eternia and Etheria.
Appearance: A dark royal warrior with a skeleton face, black-and-violet armor, and a crown shaped like broken skulls.
Backstory: She tried to destroy Captain Bike, but Angleloria stopped her. The failed attack transformed Skeletora's face into a skeletal curse.

Goal: Steal Angleloria's power, restore her old appearance, and conquer the worlds connected by the dimensional sea.

The Tugboat Rest Front

Role: A traveling tugboat restaurant and the heroes' mobile headquarters.
Features: A galley serving sailors, heroes, and travelers; a glowing engine room; protective anchors; and a secret dock that can open portals between worlds.
Captain: Captain Bike helps guide its routes while Angleloria scouts the waters ahead.

A character becomes especially memorable when their goals, flaws, and choices create the action of the story; Skeletora's desire for revenge directly clashes with Captain Bike's need to protect Angleloria.[1][2]

Cartoon Episode Script

"The Skeleton Crown Steals the Ride"

EXT. DIMENSIONAL OCEAN — DAY

The Tugboat Rest Front chugs across sparkling blue water. A huge sign reads: "HOT MEALS, SAFE HARBOR, ALL DIMENSIONS WELCOME!"

Captain Bike stands on deck beside Angleloria.

CAPTAIN BIKE:
Nothing beats a peaceful ride across the dimensional sea.

ANGLELORIA:
Peaceful… for now. I sense dark magic beyond the fog.

The sky suddenly turns purple. A jagged portal opens above the water.

SKELETORA:
Captain Bike! Angleloria belongs to me!

Skeletora appears aboard a floating skull-shaped warship, followed by her evil villainesses.

CAPTAIN BIKE:
Not today, Skeletora. This is a restaurant, not your stealing station!

SKELETORA:
Once I take Angleloria’s power, my skeleton curse will be broken—and every kingdom will kneel before Castlefor Herskull!

Skeletora fires a chain of dark energy. It wraps around Angleloria’s front wheel.

ANGLELORIA:
Captain Bike! Her magic is trying to pull me into the portal!

Captain Bike leaps aboard Angleloria.

CAPTAIN BIKE:
Then we ride forward—not backward!

Angleloria’s wheels blaze gold. She launches from the tugboat ramp, races across the ocean surface, and pulls the chain tight.

SKELETORA:
Impossible!

CAPTAIN BIKE:
You forgot something, Skeletora: Angleloria doesn’t run on fear. She runs on heart!

Angleloria activates her Supervolelicipede Shield. A burst of radiant energy breaks Skeletora’s dark chain and knocks the villainesses back onto their warship.

The restaurant tugboat blows its horn. The sound becomes a powerful wave that closes the portal.

SKELETORA:
This is not over! Castlefor Herskull will rise again!

Her warship vanishes into the closing portal.

ANGLELORIA:
The Tugboat Rest Front is safe.

CAPTAIN BIKE:
Good. Now let’s get back to work. Somebody ordered the legendary Triple-Anchor Burger!

The crew cheers as the tugboat sails into the sunset.

Action-Adventure Chapter

The Tugboat Rest Front floated through the Dimensional Ocean like a bright, friendly island with an engine. Its golden windows shone across the water, and the scent of grilled food drifted from its busy kitchen. Travelers from countless realms gathered on deck—sailors, heroes, wizards, and wandering knights—all enjoying a safe meal during their journeys.

At the front rail stood Captain Bike, watching Angleloria roll proudly beside him. Her armor gleamed under the afternoon sun.

Then the water went still.

A cold purple fog swept over the sea. The restaurant lights flickered. Angleloria's wheels stopped glowing.

"Captain Bike," she said, her voice urgent. "Castlefor Herskull has opened a path."

Above the tugboat, a black portal tore across the sky. Skeletora descended from it on her skull-shaped warship, surrounded by evil villainesses wearing dark armor. Her skeleton face shone white beneath her cracked crown.

"You took everything from me," Skeletora shouted. "My beauty. My power. My victory over the Ownerbiker!"

Captain Bike stepped forward. "You did that to yourself when you attacked innocent people."

Skeletora raised her hand. Shadow-chains exploded from the sky and wrapped around Angleloria. The chains pulled her toward the portal.

"I will take your super-bike," Skeletora said. "With Angleloria's energy, I will rebuild my face, strengthen Castlefor Herskull, and rule the Queendom between Eternia and Etheria!"

Angleloria fought the chains, but dark magic tightened around her wheels. Captain Bike climbed onto her saddle.

"Can you still ride?" he asked.

Angleloria's lights flickered once, then grew brighter. "With you beside me, always."

Captain Bike pointed toward the tugboat’s giant anchor. “Then use the Rest Front’s engine power!”

The tugboat captain understood immediately. The engines roared. The anchors dropped into the dimensional sea, locking the restaurant in place. Energy surged through its deck and into Angleloria’s armor.

Her wheels ignited with silver-and-gold fire.

“Supervolelicipede—Anchor-Flash Charge!” Angleloria cried.

She accelerated straight ahead. The chains stretched, shook, and shattered into harmless sparks. Angleloria rode up the side of Skeletora’s warship, spun through the air, and released a shield-wave that sent the villainesses tumbling backward.

Skeletora reached for Angleloria one final time.

But Captain Bike raised the Tugboat Rest Front’s glowing menu-board like a shield.

“Sorry,” he said. “No villains steal the ride—and no one leaves hungry.”

A beam from the menu-board struck Skeletora’s crown. Her portal destabilized, pulling her warship away from the tugboat.

“This defeat will not last!” Skeletora screamed as she vanished. “Castlefor Herskull will return!”

The portal snapped shut.

The Dimensional Ocean became calm again. The restaurant lights warmed. The travelers applauded as Angleloria rolled safely back onto the deck.

Captain Bike placed a hand on her shining handlebars. “We protected the Rest Front.”

Angleloria’s lights glowed softly. “Together.”

The tugboat sounded its horn and continued its journey—toward the next world, the next meal, and the next adventure.

⁂

All 3

Absolutely — here are all three together: character profiles, a cartoon episode script, and a longer action-adventure story. The central conflict is clear: Captain Bike and Angleloria protect the traveling Tugboat Rest Front, while Skeletora tries to steal Angleloria's power to undo her curse and rule the connected dimensions.[11][12]

Character Profiles

Captain Bike / Captbike

- Role: The Ownerbiker and hero of the Tugboat Rest Front.
- Ride: Angleloria, the Superfemale Knightess Rider Supervolelicipede.
- Personality: Brave, protective, quick-thinking, and kind to travelers from every dimension.
- Special skill: Knows how to use the Tugboat Rest Front's engines, anchors, kitchen equipment, and secret portal systems as defenses.
- Mission: Protect Angleloria and keep the traveling restaurant open as neutral, safe ground.

Angleloria

- Role: A living, intelligent super-bike and female knightess rider.
- Appearance: Shining silver, gold, and blue armor; glowing wheels; wing-shaped energy panels; a knightly crest above her handlebars.
- Powers: Super speed, energy shields, anti-dark-magic bursts, water riding, flight jumps, and dimensional tracking.
- Personality: Noble, strong-willed, loyal, and protective of Captbike.
- Special attack: Supervolelicipede Anchor-Flash Charge—she draws power from the tugboat's anchor engines and turns it into a golden energy rush.

Skeletora

- Role: Ruler of Castlefor Herskull and leader of the evil villainesses.
- Home: A Queendom Dimension positioned between Eternia and Etheria.

- Appearance: Dark queen armor, a broken skull crown, violet magic, and a skeleton-like face caused by her failed attack on Captbike.
- Goal: Capture Angleloria, absorb her dimensional power, remove the skeleton curse, and expand Castlefor Herskull into other worlds.
- Weakness: Her anger makes her reckless; she underestimates the loyalty between Captbike and Angleloria.

Tugboat Rest Front

- Role: A real functioning tugboat restaurant that travels through normal oceans and dimensional waterways.
- Menu: Triple-Anchor Burgers, Galaxy Fries, Etherian Sea Soup, Eternian Power Shakes, and Captain Bike's Victory Lemonade.
- Defenses: Heavy anchor chains, horn-wave blasts, fog lights, shielded kitchen doors, and a hidden dimensional dock.
- Rule: Anyone may eat in peace—unless they threaten the guests or try to steal Angleloria.

Stories become stronger when the hero and villain have opposing goals that force them to act and make difficult choices; that is exactly what drives Captbike and Skeletora's battle.[13][14]

Cartoon Episode Script

"Skeletora Steals the Supervolelicipede!"

EXT. DIMENSIONAL OCEAN — MORNING

The Tugboat Rest Front cruises over bright, sparkling water. A huge sign flashes:

TUGBOAT REST FRONT — HOT FOOD FOR EVERY WORLD!

Captbike stands at the wheel. Angleloria rests beside the deck ramp, her armor glowing in the sun.

CAPTBIKE:
Another peaceful day on the Dimensional Ocean.

ANGLELORIA:
I am detecting an unstable magical signal, Captbike.

Suddenly, the sky darkens. Purple lightning cracks overhead. A giant portal opens in the clouds.

CAPTBIKE:
That does not sound peaceful.

A skull-shaped warship descends from the portal. Skeletora stands at its front, surrounded by evil villainesses.

SKELETORA:
Captain Bike! I have returned from Castlefor Herskull!

CAPTBIKE:
Skeletora! This is a restaurant. You need a reservation.

SKELETORA:
I did not come for food! I came for Angleloria!

Skeletora raises her hand. Dark chains shoot from her warship and wrap around Angleloria’s wheels.

ANGLELORIA:
Her curse-magic is draining my speed power!

SKELETORA:
Once I steal your Supervolelicipede energy, my skeleton face will be restored! Then Eternia, Etheria, and every world between them will belong to me!

The villainesses leap onto the Tugboat Rest Front. Restaurant guests run to safety.

CAPTBIKE:
Everybody behind the kitchen shield! Angleloria, we protect the passengers first!

Angleloria activates a blue energy barrier around the guests. Skeletora’s chains grow tighter.

SKELETORA:
Now, villainesses—tow Angleloria to my ship!

Captbike looks at the tugboat’s giant anchor controls.

CAPTBIKE:
I have an idea. Angleloria, can you connect to the anchor engine?

ANGLELORIA:
Yes—but I will need a full-speed launch!

CAPTBIKE:
Then let’s make waves!

Captbike pulls the anchor lever. The tugboat’s engines roar. Its massive anchors lock into the dimensional sea.

CAPTBIKE:
Tugboat Rest Front—maximum anchor power!

Golden energy runs through the deck and into Angleloria. Her wheels light up brighter than ever.

ANGLELORIA:
Supervolelicipede Anchor-Flash Charge!

Angleloria races up the ramp, across the ocean, and directly toward Skeletora’s warship. The dark chains stretch behind her.

SKELETORA:
Stop her!

The villainesses fire shadow bolts. Angleloria swerves across the water, dodging each blast.

CAPTBIKE:
Left! Now jump!

Angleloria launches off a wave, spins in the air, and fires a gold-and-blue shield burst. The chains explode into sparks.

SKELETORA:
No! My curse power!

The Tugboat Rest Front blows its giant horn. A powerful sound-wave strikes Skeletora's warship and pushes it back toward the open portal.

CAPTBIKE:
No bike stealing at my restaurant!

SKELETORA:
This defeat changes nothing! Castlefor Herskull will rise again!

Skeletora and the villainesses disappear through the portal. It closes with a flash.

The sea becomes calm.

ANGLELORIA:
The Tugboat Rest Front is safe once more.

CAPTBIKE:
And now, I believe somebody ordered Galaxy Fries.

The guests cheer. The tugboat sails onward.

THE END

Action-Adventure Story

The Battle of Castlefor Herskull

The Tugboat Rest Front sailed through the Dimensional Ocean with its engines humming and its kitchen working at full speed. The traveling tugboat restaurant welcomed heroes, sailors, and visitors from many worlds. On one table, an Eternian warrior ate a Triple-Anchor Burger. At another, an Etherian traveler sipped glowing sea soup.

Captbike stood near the deck rail with Angleloria beside him.

The Superfemale Knightess Rider Supervolelicipede had been quiet all morning. Her glowing wheels flickered as though they sensed danger beneath the ocean.

"Something is coming," Angleloria said.

Before Captbike could answer, the sea turned dark.

A great shadow passed over the tugboat. Purple lightning split the sky, opening a portal above the restaurant. Out of it floated a fortress-ship shaped like a skull. Black sails snapped in the wind. At its front stood Skeletora.

Her skeleton face gleamed beneath her cracked crown.

“Captbike!” Skeletora shouted. “You thought I was defeated!”

Captbike stepped forward. “You tried to destroy me. Angleloria stopped you. Then you ran back to Castlefor Herskull.”

“I did not run,” Skeletora said. “I rebuilt my army.”

The evil villainesses appeared behind her. Some carried shadow-spears. Others rode black hover-bikes. One held a glowing cage built to trap Angleloria.

Skeletora pointed toward the super-bike.

“Take her,” she commanded.

Dark chains rushed from the fortress-ship and wrapped around Angleloria. Her wheels sparked as the curse-magic tried to pull her toward the portal.

“I cannot break free,” Angleloria warned. “The magic comes from the Queendom Dimension itself.”

Captbike gripped her handlebars.

“You are not facing it alone,” he said.

The Tugboat Rest Front’s passengers hurried into the dining hall. Captbike activated the emergency restaurant shields, sealing the doors with bright blue energy.

Then he looked toward the kitchen.

“Chef! I need every power cell from the freezer engines!”

The chef nodded and rolled a cart of glowing cells onto the deck. Captbike connected them to the tugboat’s anchor controls.

Skeletora laughed from above.

“You cannot fight Castlefor Herskull with restaurant equipment!”

Captbike smiled.

“You have never seen what this restaurant can do.”

He pressed the anchor control.

The Tugboat Rest Front’s engines thundered. Its massive anchors dropped into the Dimensional Ocean and reached deep into the water. A stream of golden power surged up the chains, across the deck, and into Angleloria.

Her armor transformed.

Silver became brighter than moonlight. Gold flared across her wheels. Blue wings of energy opened behind her.

“Angleloria,” Captbike said, climbing onto her saddle. “Let’s ride.”

The tugboat ramp lowered.

Angleloria charged.

She burst across the ocean at incredible speed, dragging Skeletora’s dark chains behind her. The chains pulled tight, but Angleloria did not stop. Captbike leaned forward as purple fire flew past them.

“Villainesses!” Skeletora shouted. “Bring her down!”

Black hover-bikes raced through the sky. Captbike guided Angleloria through the attacks. She spun over waves, slid beneath shadow bolts, and leapt from the ocean surface like a knight charging into battle.

They reached Skeletora’s fortress-ship.

Angleloria drove straight up its side. Her glowing wheels gripped the dark metal. Captbike and Angleloria reached the top deck, facing Skeletora at last.

“You cannot win,” Skeletora said. “My skeleton curse will be broken when I take your bike’s heart-power.”

Angleloria rolled forward.

“My power is not something you can steal,” she said. “It comes from loyalty, courage, and the choice to protect others.”

Skeletora raised both hands. A huge storm of dark magic formed above Castlefor Herskull’s warship.

Captbike pointed toward the Dimensional Ocean.

“Angleloria—Anchor-Flash Charge!”

Angleloria’s wheels exploded with golden energy. She raced in a circle around Skeletora, faster and faster, creating a glowing spiral. The spiral pulled Skeletora’s shadow storm away from the restaurant and into the sky.

Skeletora screamed as her magic broke apart.

“No! My power!”

The skull crown on her head cracked. The fortress-ship shook. Its portal began to collapse.

Captbike and Angleloria leapt from the ship just as it was pulled back toward Castlefor Herskull.

“This is not the end!” Skeletora shouted from inside the fading portal. “I will return!”

Then the portal sealed shut.

Angleloria landed safely on the deck of the Tugboat Rest Front. The passengers emerged from the restaurant and cheered.

Captbike looked across the calm sea.

“Castlefor Herskull will return someday,” he said.

Angleloria’s lights glowed warmly.

“Then someday, we will be ready.”

The Tugboat Rest Front blew its horn, served its guests, and continued traveling toward new adventures across the worlds.

"The Attack of Castleforta Herskull!"

EXT. DIMENSIONAL OCEAN — DAY

The Tugboat Rest Front travels across bright blue water. Guests enjoy lunch on deck as Captbike checks the route.

Angleloria's wheels begin flashing gold and violet.

ANGLELORIA:
Captbike, I sense Castleforta Herskull opening a portal.

CAPTBIKE:
Then Skeletora is coming for trouble—and probably not for the lunch menu.

The sky turns dark. A giant skull-shaped portal opens above the ocean.

Castleforta Herskull appears on a floating black island. Its towers crackle with purple lightning.

SKELETORA:
Captbike! Angleloria! Castleforta Herskull has come to claim its prize!

Dark chains fire from the fortress and wrap around Angleloria.

ANGLELORIA:
Her castle is using its entire curse-engine against me!

SKELETORA:
Bring Angleloria to my Shadow-Bike Dungeon! When I drain her heart-power, my face will be restored!

Evil villainesses descend onto the Tugboat Rest Front.

CAPTBIKE:
Guests, move inside! Kitchen crew, activate the dining-room shield!

A glowing barrier protects the restaurant. Captbike jumps onto Angleloria.

CAPTBIKE:
Can you still move?

ANGLELORIA:
Only if we use the tugboat anchors.

Captbike pulls the emergency lever. The tugboat's anchors crash into the Dimensional Ocean. Golden energy races through the chains and enters Angleloria.

CAPTBIKE:
Tugboat Rest Front—full anchor power!

ANGLELORIA:
Supervolelicipede Anchor-Flash Charge!

Angleloria races over the sea, dragging Skeletora's dark chains behind her. She speeds toward the floating fortress.

SKELETORA:
Stop them!

The villainesses launch shadow-bolts. Angleloria twists through the air, jumps across waves, and lands on Castleforta Herskull's outer bridge.

CAPTBIKE:
We have to reach the Crown Forge!

Inside the castle, Skeletora stands before a machine shaped like a skull crown. It pulls power from Angleloria's chains.

SKELETORA:
Soon I will have my beauty, my strength, and your bike!

Captbike points to the glowing machine.

CAPTBIKE:
Angleloria—Knightess Heart Shield!

Angleloria activates a radiant shield. The light spreads through the Crown Forge, breaking the curse-chains and cracking the skull machine.

SKELETORA:
No! Castleforta Herskull obeys me!

ANGLELORIA:
A castle cannot obey cruelty forever.

The Crown Forge explodes in purple-and-gold sparks. Castleforta Herskull begins sinking back toward its portal.

SKELETORA:
Retreat! But I will rebuild my fortress, and I will return!

Castleforta Herskull disappears.

Back on the Tugboat Rest Front, Captbike smiles.

CAPTBIKE:
The restaurant is safe.

ANGLELORIA:
And the guests can finish their meals.

The tugboat horn sounds. Everyone cheers.

Action-Adventure Story

The Crown Forge of Castleforta Herskull

The Tugboat Rest Front sailed peacefully through the Dimensional Ocean. Its engine hummed below deck, its kitchen steamed with fresh meals, and its passengers laughed beneath bright lanterns.

Captbike stood near the wheelhouse while Angleloria rested at the front ramp. The Superfemale Knightess Rider Supervolelicipede suddenly lowered her glowing headlights.

“Captbike,” she said. “The Queendom Dimension is moving.”

The ocean trembled.

A purple line appeared in the clouds. It widened into a giant portal surrounded by skull-shaped lightning. Beyond it stood Castleforta Herskull: a towering fortress of black stone, violet crystal, and twisted bridges. Its highest tower carried Skeletora’s broken crown symbol.

Skeletora appeared on the castle balcony.

“You stopped me once,” she shouted. “But now Castleforta Herskull gives me strength beyond any rider’s power!”

The fortress fired shadow chains across the sky. They wrapped around Angleloria and lifted her partly from the tugboat deck.

Captbike grabbed her handlebars.

“Hold on!”

“I am trying,” Angleloria answered, “but the Crown Forge is pulling directly on my heart-power.”

Skeletora laughed.

“That heart-power will rebuild my face. It will erase this skeleton curse. Then I will rule Eternia, Etheria, the Queendom Dimension, and every sea between them!”

Captbike looked at the struggling bike, then at the frightened restaurant guests. He made his choice.

“Angleloria comes first,” he said. “But so do the people on this tugboat.”

He ordered the crew to activate the dining-room shield. The restaurant windows glowed blue, protecting everyone inside. Then he climbed onto Angleloria.

“We are going into the castle,” Captbike said.

Angleloria’s wheels sparked weakly.

“Then we will go together.”

Captbike engaged the Tugboat Rest Front’s anchor engines. Massive anchors crashed into the ocean floor below. Golden power ran through the chains, across the deck, and into Angleloria’s armor.

Her wheels shone bright gold.

The dark chains pulled her toward Castleforta Herskull—but Captbike turned that pull into speed.

Angleloria shot forward across the sea.

They raced toward the fortress under a storm of shadow bolts. Captbike guided her past shattered rock islands and falling purple lightning. Angleloria leapt onto the castle’s iron bridge and charged through the enormous gate.

Inside, the castle was colder than the ocean. Skull torches glowed on the walls. Evil villainesses rushed from the War Hall, trying to surround them.

“Shadow-Bike Dungeon!” one villainess cried.

“Not today,” Captbike answered.

Angleloria activated her Knightess Heart Shield. Golden light burst outward, pushing the villainesses back without hurting them. Captbike and Angleloria sped through the fortress until they reached the Crown Forge.

It was enormous: a machine of black metal and purple crystal shaped like a skeletal crown. At its center, Angleloria’s stolen energy swirled in a spinning sphere.

Skeletora stood before it.

“You arrived just in time,” she said. “Watch me become whole again.”

She reached toward the energy sphere.

Captbike shook his head.

“You cannot become whole by taking from someone else.”

Skeletora fired a wave of curse-magic. Angleloria shielded Captbike, but the blast pushed them toward the edge of the forge platform.

“Now!” Skeletora commanded.

The Crown Forge tightened its hold on Angleloria’s power.

Captbike placed both hands on Angleloria’s handlebars.

“Your power is not in that machine,” he said. “It is in every time you chose to protect someone.”

Angleloria’s lights brightened.

The shield around her became stronger. Gold, silver, and blue energy spread from her wheels across the floor of the Crown Forge. The darkness in the machine began to crack.

Skeletora’s crown shook.

“No,” she whispered. “That power belongs to me!”

“It never did,” Angleloria replied.

She released the Supervolelicipede Anchor-Flash Charge.

The golden blast shattered the shadow chains and broke the Crown Forge apart. Purple crystal rained across the room. Castleforta Herskull trembled as its portal power failed.

Skeletora staggered backward. Her fortress began sliding toward the open portal beyond its towers.

“This is not finished!” she cried. “Castleforta Herskull will rise again!”

Captbike and Angleloria raced out across the collapsing bridge. They leapt from the fortress just as it vanished through the portal.

They landed safely on the Tugboat Rest Front.

The restaurant passengers cheered. The cooks brought Captbike and Angleloria a warm meal from the kitchen.

Angleloria looked toward the empty sky.

“Skeletora will return,” she said.

Captbike nodded.

“Then the Tugboat Rest Front will be ready.”

The tugboat horn sounded across the Dimensional Ocean as the restaurant continued toward its next great adventure.
